Stabbing leads to murder charge

BY ELLIS C. CUEVAS

The stabbing to the shoulder of a Waveland resident launching his boat Friday morning, led to his death that night, Hancock County Criminal Investigator Glen Strong, said Saturday.

"Gregory Allen Dominach, 38, 501 Canal St., Metairie, La., is being held in the Hancock County Criminal Justice Facility without bond on charges of the murder of Walter Perkins, 38, 808 Villere St., Waveland."

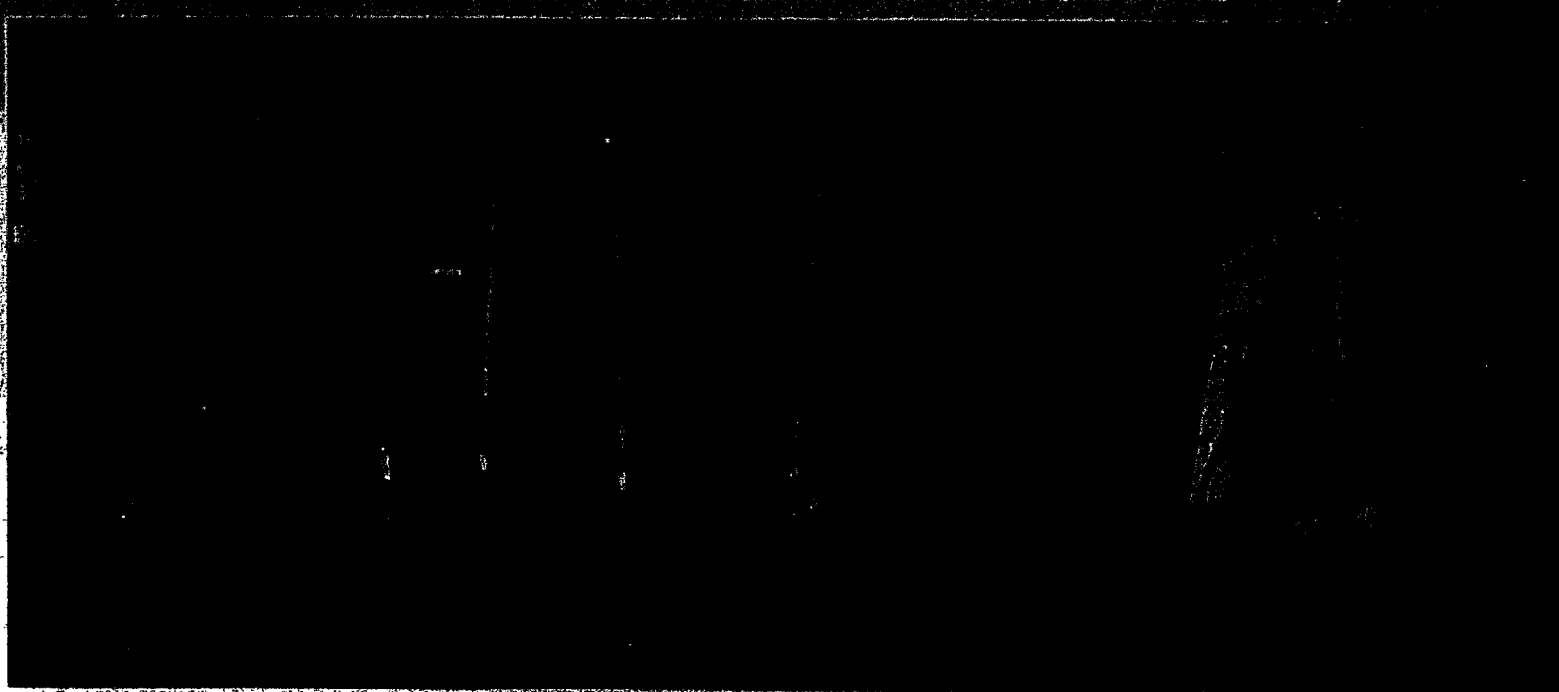

Preliminary indications are that Perkins, who was launching his boat at Bordages Fishing Camp, Bayou Caddy, about 7 a.m. Friday, was stabbed by Dominach, Strong said.

Perkins was transported to Hancock Medical Center and underwent a long and intensive surgery Friday morning and later died from complications of the stabbing, Strong said.

Dominach was originally charged with aggravated assault and was in jail in lieu of a $100,000 bond. The charges were changed to murder at 10:15 p.m., according to Strong.

Perkins was an employee of the City of Waveland in the water and gas department.

The investigation continues by Strong, who is assisted by Hancock Deputy Kenny Hurt.

Toomey withdraws in mayor's race

BY SHARON K. SAUCIER

Waveland voters in the Dec. 6 general election will have one less candidate to decide on in the mayoral race.

Jack Toomey, independent candidate for mayor, withdrew from the race on Friday citing health reasons.

"My doctor said that I may not be able to handle the stress of the position, because of my heart, if I won. I don't want to have to put the taxpayers through the cost of having a special election if anything happens to me," Toomey said.

Toomey said that he would like to thank his supporters and does not recommend that they vote for any particular candidate.

"Let them run their own race," he said.

Candidates still in the running are Democratic nominee Keith Mitchell and Republican nominee John Mason.

Investigator nabs burglars at scene

BY SHARON K. SAUCIER

Two alleged burglars have been captured and one is still at large following a burglary of a residence in the Caesar Community this week.

Ellis Bennett, 25, 14110 Pleasant Hills Rd., Picayune and a 16-year old white male were captured by Hancock County Sheriff's Department Investigator George Burleson as they were allegedly trying to leave the scene, Burleson said.

"The subjects were apprehended in the woods behind the residence that was burglarized. One subject fled the scene," Burleson said.

But the department knows who the subject is and has listed him on N.C.I.C.

"The subject that we are looking for is known as Robert Ashley Lloyd, 21. He is a white male with brown hair and blue eyes. He is approximately 5'11" tall and weighs 140 pounds. He has no previous criminal history that we can find," Burleson said.

Pearl River County Sheriff Dan McNeill, members of his investigative department and their tracking dog responded to the scene and searched for Lloyd for more than an hour before losing his trail, Burleson said.

County school bus joy ride ends in Slidell

BY SHARON K. SAUCIER

Two teenagers went on a joy-ride Tuesday. The only problem was that neither one of them was old enough to have a driver's license and they took a school bus.

The Hancock County Sheriff's Department received a call at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday that a 13-year old and a 14-year old had stolen a school bus from Gulfview Elementary and had plans to leave the state, Hancock County Sheriff's Department Investigator Nathan Hoda said.

The two were picked up in Slidell, at 9:15 p.m. and their parents were sent to pick them up and bring them back to Hancock County to face grand larceny charges.

While allegedly attempting to steal the bus, the teens ran through gates and knock a fence down around the school, Hoda said.

When they were caught, Hoda said, they were arguing over who was going to drive the bus.

Staff Sgt. Corkey Hoda, Cpl. Tim Broder and Sgt. Tim Willette are assisting in the case.

Stennis Center made home of Gulf program

BY MARY G. SEILEY

Not far from Stennis Space Center, the Gulf of Mexico laps gently and almost imperceptibly, moving into and off of the shore. The waters are just there -- like a favorite old picture on the wall, a faithful friend standing by.

Shrimp boats and barges dot its horizon, and sun lovers settle down along its edges. Dogs and children splash in it. Pelicans perch on docks that extend like frail fingers out into it.

But the placid picture belies what's really happening with the Gulf, known to many as "America's Sea."

A five-state effort to track the Gulf's state of health, with scores of projects to improve the body of water's well-being, and project its future, is centered at Stennis.

The effort, named the Gulf of Mexico Program, involves officials of a wide range of federal and state agencies, scientists, professors, school teachers, students and interested citizens.

To be successful, the effort has to balance the impact and demands of human activities and needs, such as fishing and oil exploration, and the preservation of the Gulf's resources.

And those resources are enormous: the Gulf yields more finfish, shrimp and shellfish yearly than the South and Mid-Atlantic, the Chesapeake and New England regions combined, officials say.

It is critical habitat for 75 percent of the migratory waterfowl crossing the United States. Its coastal wetlands comprise fishing activities in the continental United States take place in the Gulf.

The Gulf tourism industry is estimated at $20 billion annually.

The Gulf of Mexico Program was begun in 1988, under the leadership of the federal Environmental Protection Agency. From a modest beginning, the program now boasts a firm commitment of top officials in the five states that border the Gulf, including Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida.

In addition, program officials are courting a growing involvement of other nations, including Mexico, Puerto Rico and Jamaica. In the United States, the program is increasingly focusing on the impact that non-border states have on the Gulf -- the far reaches of the Gulf watershed stretch to Canada. Two thirds of the contiguous United States drains into the Gulf.

What's in place now for the program amounts to an awesome organization of the public and private sectors says Diane Altsman, chief of external

REFLECTIONS ON LIFE
 By Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, Haitian strongman rendered wimp, blinked as he ended his resignation statement amid screams, taunts and curses from his erstwhile terrorized subjects. Just another daily lesson in our international course on — what else? — the international poison of ambition. Since ignoring history bears the pain of repeating it, history has clearly been ignored from the days of Adam and his wife, Eve. While the twisted ambition of our protoparents was to have their eyes opened and to be like gods knowing what is good and bad (Gn. 3:5), the international poisonous snake of the ages is bent on conquering, controlling and exploiting. Typified by an unbending Pharaoh of Egypt who wanted to keep the Jews under his feet, ambition is cold, ruthless and relentless in its pursuits. It took ten plagues to move Pharaoh, and it took the American army to oust Cedras. Even many of the best have been tainted by ambition and its confederate passions. Witness the rise and fall of the wisest man of all time, Solomon, and his great son, David. The Scriptures go on to report that most of the Jewish kings did not rely on God to direct and sustain their lives, and so fell by the weight of their own ambition and perfidy. Graphic, lurid, sometimes hair-raising tales of ambition are told through much of the Old Testament, recording some of the earliest instances of the international poison within and surrounding the pristine Jewish community. One is at a loss to ascertain whether the poison of ambition was uglier and deadlier within or without the Jewish nation. Seemingly, we have to give the edge in ugliness to a couple of latter-day tyrants, Adolph Hitler and Joseph Stalin. Not far behind would be Attila the Hun, Genghis Khan and Big Daddy Idi Amin of Uganda. Not to neglect more refined butchers blinded by ambition, let's add Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar and Napoleon Bonaparte. Some female leaders also deserve dishonorable mention, but we will dispense with that. Suffice it to say, even where males wield external power, ambitious females are often the power behind the throne or seat of government. Jesus was approached by his apostles James and John with the request: "See to it that we sit, one at your right and the other at your left, when you come into your glory." With full knowledge of all history before him, Jesus admonished his ambitious apostles: "You know how among the Gentiles those who seem to exercise authority lord it over them; their great ones make their importance felt. 'It cannot be like that with you. Anyone among you who aspires to greatness must serve the rest. Whoever wants to rank first among you must serve the needs of all' (Mk. 10: 37-43). This was an alien message which the apostles did not want to hear and did not understand, because they were children of the world unenlightened by the teachings of Jesus. It is no less alien to all of us, because we are all infected with varying degrees of straining to control. We harp on the glaring faults of our president, of congress, of our church and other leaders, sometimes forgetting our own. We would have no tensions in any relationships if we could refrain from trying to be first, to control, to exploit.

Bay councilman wants information

BY MARY G. SEILEY
Bay St. Louis City Council member James C. Thriffley wants more information on how the city's operating. Thriffley ticked off a list Monday of data he wants compiled and presented to Council -- and he requested regular reports from city employees and consultants. Without elaboration, Thriffley asked for a detailed report on which city employees are taking leave, and why. He also asked for a further explanation of the status of terms of members of the city Planning and Zoning Commission -- when they were appointed and when their terms expire.

He also asked for a report on where the city does its banking, and how much interest it's getting on accounts. Mayor Eddie Favre said no detailed report is necessary -- the city keeps its cash at Merchants Bank and the annual interest earned is reflected in annual audits of the city finances. In another matter, Thriffley asked for regular reports from Les Fillingame and Buz Olsen, two administration officials who handle major city projects. "We deal with those guys now on the level of consultants. I like to see everyone we're paying," said Thriffley. And he said that request includes regular reports from consultants the city hires to handle specific projects.

affairs for the Gulf of Mexico Program. In addition to EPA, the program has full-time staffers at Stennis from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Food and Drug Administration, Soil Conservation Service, National Oceanographic Atmospheric Administration/National Marine Fisheries Service, and the Army Corps of Engineers. There is a vast committee system at work, with a management group of state and federal officials overseeing the program, and a citizens advisory committee, with five members from each of the five Gulf States. A technical advisory committee pools state and federal agency personnel, academia and public sector interests. But the heart of the program's operation centers around eight "issue" committees that were formed to address specific program areas. Their agendas are far from dull. One such panel, for instance, studies habitat degradation, including the impact of runoff from pesticides, sewage, marine debris, and such physical alterations as dredging and construction on the quality of the Gulf's habitat. Another issues panel deals with marine trash through into the water, posing hazards to plants, animals and boats. A toxic substances panel studies and harmful or deadly substances that reach the Gulf, impacting humans through the food chain. Meanwhile, a coastal and shoreline erosion panel is tracking the loss of shorelines -- parts of Louisiana retreat 65 feet per year or more, while erosion rates of 15 feet annually are reported in other areas of the Gulf. One issues committee is studying "nutrient enrichment," from fertilizers, sewage and detergents that enter the Gulf and spark the growth of algae, which blocks the sunlight some animals and vegetation must have to survive. Another group is studying freshwater inflow from rivers and streams into the Gulf, and a separate panel deals with management and protection of all organisms which depend on the Gulf.

Another issues panel deals with public health problems related to pollutants and other substances found in seafood and in the water. The work that's done in the committees, and by state and federal scientists and area educators, is organized and presented biannually at a Gulf Program symposium. The first such session in 1990 drew some 900 participants to a four-day meeting in New Orleans. Two years later, over 2,000 participants met for a symposium in Tarpon Springs, Florida. Altsman expects over 2,000 at the upcoming symposium in Corpus Christi, Texas, with cut rates available for students and senior citizens. Plans call for a theme emphasizing future directions of the program. One locally-based future direction is creation of a vast Public Information Center at Stennis, to disseminate the wealth of knowledge the program has compiled. Plans for the information center at Stennis include public access to issue-related publications and computer on-line data bases, and photographic and interactive displays and videos.

QUOTES

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Ask this question, are you ready for Christmas? Your answer will probably be the same as most folks.

Santa's annual visit to the area is only four weeks from today, so if you haven't gotten yourself ready for Christmas, the time is now.

I would like to recommend for everyone to shop at home for those many gifts that go under the tree.

There are many reasons to shop at home.

We have a wide variety of stores in the area, and one can buy just about anything.

There are possibly some of your friends who own, or work at the shops near you.

Your community benefits too from the sales taxes collected on purchases.

You may also be known in the shops in your area, and this makes for easier shopping when you purchase from a friend.

The list goes on and on.

Activities really increase for the Christmas scene starting next weekend with all of the celebrations.

Santa will be making his annual visit to Hancock County for the Chamber of Commerce's Red Ribbon Christmas Parade set for Saturday, Dec. 3.

This will be the 5th Red Ribbon Christmas and participation this year is at an all time high.

The chamber is really promoting the Red Ribbon events this year.

The downtown Bay St. Louis parade will begin at 11 a.m. and Santa is scheduled to take time from his busy schedule to receive the wishes of all good boys and girls.

Waveland's Festival of Lights is set for Sunday, Dec. 4th.

Also on Sunday, Dec. 4, the annual Christmas Card Lane (Mollere Drive, Waveland) is set for 6 p.m.

The neighborhood really gets it together, as the saying goes for this special celebration which has become a tradition in Waveland.

There will be displays of Christmas Decorations on the lawns of the residents of Mollere Drive.

Many of the residents also have private parties for friends and relatives.

Friday, Dec. 9, Our Lady Academy's Magnolia Christmas is set for 6 p.m. on the grounds of Our Lady of the Gulf Catholic Church, Bay St. Louis.

Saturday, Dec. 17 is the Christmas By The Bay in Old Time Bay St. Louis from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Then on Dec. 17, Diamondhead's Parade of Lights is set for 5 p.m. at the Diamondhead Yacht Club.

Santa has several special appearances set for the area and I know all of the youngsters want to make sure he receives their wish list.

This is just a mention of some of the events which are upcoming for the Christmas season.

We will be giving you more news on the above and other happenings in the area as they near.

I am hoping everyone will have a safe and happy shopping time in preparation for Christmas. Remember, to shop at home too.

Record Can Get You A Record

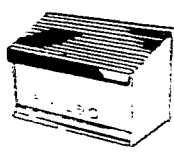

As in a criminal one. And it's a long-playing version that can haunt you for the rest of your life.

If you shoplift, chances are good that you will get caught. Because today's merchants are pretty fed up and have more sophisticated ways of detecting this expensive crime. Not to mention harsher ways of dealing with it.

When you think about it, there's really nothing you can steal that's worth the price.

So please, don't steal that record or CD, or anything else unless you're willing to face the music.

Musical groups need to turn down amplifiers

To the Editor,

Us old people can hear better than them young people I think, else why do today's musical groups turn up their amplifiers so high, one can hear them a mile away, like when they are performing in the so-called 'Golden Dome' of Casino Magic.

Lordy, we went to one and had to stuff the ears with pieces of a napkin, it hurt so bad. And others were doing the same.

We can hear them when outside our home a mile away and it's almost too loud then.

Suggestions to turn down the amps get answers like, "That's the way the band wants it." I assume the members of the group have lost their hearing from the competition with each other. But I will not lose mine by getting in the 'Golden Dome' again as it is now.

Americans must stop GATT

Although most Americans have heard of GATT, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, it is estimated that less than one-third of Americans know what GATT is or how it will affect their lives.

After spending months fine-tuning the bill to his liking, President Clinton is now pushing the bill as a great worldwide trade agreement. The bill will place less developed countries on level footing with America by lowering tariffs and extending trading rules to cover world commerce.

It's a great trade agreement if you happen to be one of the dozens of third world countries readying to take advantage of lower U.S. tariffs and extended trading rules.

One of many concerns I have is the great potential the bill has in reducing the average American middle class worker's salary to an all-time low.

Under the agreement, if American middle-class workers fail to restrain wage demands their companies will either fail or pack up for lower-wage foreign nations. The bill actually encourages American manufacturing to transplant factories to foreign countries.

Our nation's multi-million dollar trade deficit will obviously increase while our manufacturing industry goes into a tail-spin. Additional concerns revolve around the fact that GATT will create the world's largest bureaucracy while most Americans are demanding less government in their lives.

Mississippi United We Stand Director James Smith recently wrote members of the organization warning them of the bureaucratic nightmare that would be formed under GATT.

"The World Trade Organization will create a body in which Cuba and Yemen will have the same vote as the United States," said Smith. "Our labor and environmental laws can be challenged as trade barriers."

World renowned economist Sir James Goldsmith also warned Americans at a Nov. 14 Congressional hearing, that GATT will sap the United States' economic strength. The World Trade Organization will have the authority to revoke U.S. and state laws.

For the President to jeopardize America's and Mississippi's sovereignty is ludicrous. Additionally, as one of the more fiscally responsible members of Congress, I think that if most Americans knew how we planned to pay for GATT they would stop it in its tracks.

Under Congressional budget rules, GATT must mandate cuts and revenue increases to offset the billions of dollars in lost revenues from tariff reductions. Close to home, millions of dollars in Mississippi agriculture subsidies already have been targeted for cuts.

Don't be fooled. The GATT agreement will be an economic boom for dozens of third world countries. For America it will create more bureaucracy, accelerate the decline of our manufacturing base, circumvent U.S. labor and environmental laws and hurt our farmers and farm workers.

EYES ON MISSISSIPPI

Molpus wants sales taxes cut on groceries

Dick Molpus last week joined the long-awaited debate with Gov. Kirk Fordice on the governorship next year over a very legitimate issue: if taxes are to be cut, where should the cuts be made?

The Secretary of State picked the occasion of a newsmaker luncheon sponsored by the Mississippi Press Association and the Stennis Institute at Mississippi State University to challenge Fordice's idea of a state income tax cut with his own proposal.

No doubt, it was the opening parry of the 1995 governor's race between Molpus and Fordice, although neither has said definitely he is running.

Molpus unveiled his idea that the place to ease the state tax burden for the average Mississippian is to reduce the sales tax on groceries, now the highest in the nation.

The sales tax on groceries such as meat, milk, bread and vegetables could be cut from 7 percent to 4 percent and "give all Mississippians a break," Molpus said. It would cost no more (in fact a little less) in revenue loss than Fordice's $78 million income tax cut proposal, he said.

Strategically, it was a wise move for Molpus to open the debate with Fordice at this time, more than a month before the convening of the 1995 legislature.

Fordice, who had initially come out for the income tax proposal last year (it got nowhere in the legislature) had preempted the populist political ground of the next governor's race by recently renewing his income tax cut pitch, in his proposed budget to the legislature.

In effect he was running with his tax cut ball in an open field, until Molpus smartly executed a possibly game-saving tackle.

Because of the widespread popularity of reducing taxes that has gained momentum everywhere, Mississippi included, lawmakers here have naturally been feeling the pressure to lower taxes.

But experienced legislative fiscal leaders felt uncomfortable with the idea of reducing the already-low state income tax and possibly Molpus has provided them with a reasonable alternative.

A number of states—25 in all—entirely exempt food sold in grocery stores from sales taxes, and several others such as Louisiana at 2 percent have a reduced rate. Mississippi is the only state with the sales tax as high as 7 percent that fully taxes groceries.

Fordice has gone back to his proposal that the state needs to cut the state income tax over three years by raising personal exemptions, mainly for married couples. His proposal would put the exemption for couples or heads of households up from $9,500 to $14,000.

The Fordice people calculated that the saving would be $160 to $200 per family, an estimate that seems high based on existing figures.

The Statistical Abstract of the United States for 1992 showed a per household median family income in Mississippi of $20,585. A family in Mississippi with two children with existing exemptions has to have a net income of $16,000 in order to pay any state income tax.

So based on the 3 percent rate which would apply to the $4,500 income over that, the average household now is paying only $135 in state income tax.

What few people realize is that corporations in Mississippi pay no higher income tax rates than individuals—both have a rate of 3 percent on the first $5,000, 4 percent on the next $5,000, and 5 percent on income above that. Most states have a separate, higher income tax rate on corporations.

Federal income taxes are what mostly affect the pocketbook of Mississippi taxpayers. Although it has been much maligned here and elsewhere, the 1993 budget bill of the Clinton administration contained a healthy break for lower income families with children in what is known as the Earned Income Tax Credit.

Under the bill, families earning up to $28,000 with two children in school or college up to age 24 can qualify for a $1,500 tax credit which is refundable, plus another tax credit of $350 per child for medical coverage.

You hear virtually nothing about the tax credits for lower income families amidst the barrage against the Clinton budget bill because the bill also raised the top income tax bracket on those making over $200,000 a year.

Molpus took Fordice to task for taking a "politically easy" route of proposing a $78 million tax cut without saying where the money would come from.

Still, without saying definitely he is a candidate for governor, Molpus declared that if he is in a position to propose the sales tax cut, "I won't make promises unless I know the financial basis for it."

He added that if Fordice could show that state revenues can be reduced by $78 million, "we need to reduce the sales tax on groceries and I'll support that." The saving to an average family by reducing the sales tax on groceries, Molpus estimated, would run $209.

Mississippi for years has been shown in national rankings to be among the highest in the nation in sales taxes paid per $100,000 income and among the lowest in income taxes.

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

A Weekly Editorial
From Mississippi Economic Council

Landowners are pleading the Fifth Amendment

Landowners across America have been "pleading the Fifth" lately, but not to avoid tough questions in the courtroom. Instead, it's the landowners asking the tough questions.

They want to know what has happened to their private property rights, which are spelled out in the Fifth Amendment's final few words: "...nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation."

The intent of the law is straightforward—if the government wants to use privately owned land, the government must pay for it.

But since the 1970s, under pressure from extremist environmental and conservation groups, government has been trampling citizens' Fifth Amendment rights for the sake of the Endangered Species Act.

Government is dictating—without compensation to landowners—how their privately owned land may be used, or how it may not be used.

Just ask landowners in the Northwest, where millions of acres of timberland were declared off limits in 1990 for timber harvesting in order to protect the spotted owl. As a result, private landowners can neither harvest the timber nor sell the land to other investors because it will no longer yield a profit.

Adding insult to injury, the landowners are required to continue paying property taxes on their "government managed" lands.

Giving thanks and sharing

For the second consecutive year, employees of Casino Magic Bay St. Louis and Biloxi donated food for the needy during the Thanksgiving holiday. A total of 50 baskets, including a Thanksgiving turkey and all the trimmings, were distributed to needy families in our area. Employee response to this worthy cause is another way of sharing with the less fortunate. Names of the recipients were obtained from various charitable organizations along the Mississippi Gulf Coast. Helping hand out the baskets is Casino Magic's Dual Cooper, left, president of Casino Magic Corporation.

National Home Care Week to be celebrated in Mississippi

Nov. 27 through Dec. 2 is being recognized as National Home Care Week. This week will be celebrated in Mississippi and across the United States by home care providers, patients and their caregivers.

It is a week set aside by the U.S. Congress to honor the talented and hard-working individuals who provide home care services to the elderly, disabled and chronically ill.

Included in the recognition during this special week are physicians who have always played the central and guiding role in providing the convenience and continuity of health care in the home, as well as state and national policymakers who support home health as a cost-effective, preferred alternative to institutionalization.

As the health care market changes, more and more health care will be rendered in the home. The providers of home care services in Mississippi are experienced in the industry and positioned well for any future health care reform measures.

For example, in 1992, Mississippi boasted the second lowest cost in the nation for home health visits, $40.67, compared to a national cost per visit of $56.02. In 1993, the most recent statistical reporting period for the Mississippi State Department of Health, 75,493 Mississippi patients were served by home health, a dramatic increase from the 1985 level of 41,923 patients.

Home health care may seem like a new idea, but it's not. Historically, health care was delivered in the home. The movement of health care back into the home is due to advances in medical technology and specialized training of professionals. In recent years, home health services has embraced many facets of treatment previously reserved for the hospital only, including dialysis, blood transfusions, chemotherapy and other intravenous therapies.

Along with the growth in patient services technological advancements and total number of individuals receiving care, there is of course related growth in the number of health care professionals and support personnel employed in the home health industry.

In Mississippi in 1993, more than 7,609 individuals were employed by home health, a 27.9% increase over 1992 employment levels. Nationally, the total number of home care workers is estimated to be approximately 657,622 in 1994.

The frequency of visits by a home health team depends on the doctor's prescribed care. However, regardless of the frequency of visits, home health creates a unique relationship between the patient and the home health professional.

This relationship is hard to duplicate in a hospital or nursing home. For home-bound patients, home care is not only cost-effective but it is a humane and compassionate form of health care which allows them to maintain dignity and independence in the familiar and comforting surroundings of their own home.

For a free packet of information on home health services, advantages and eligibility, write or call Mississippi Association for Home Care, (601) 362-8987, P.O. Box 68681, Jackson, Mississippi 39286.

The Mississippi Association for Home Care (MAHC) is a non-profit trade association which promotes home health care and its benefits in our state.

MAHC has been providing leadership for the Medicare-certified home health industry in Mississippi since 1975. Originally named the Mississippi Home Health Association, MAHC represents free-standing and hospital-based providers.

JOHN "TOM" LONGO

Alderman Ward 1

There is much, much more and I'm excited about getting started, but I need your vote. Let's work together to move Waveland forward so I can begin work for the greatest asset Waveland has ever known ...

It's People!
Your vote and support greatly appreciated.

Certain needs must be addressed upon taking office:
1) Drainage: A comprehensive plan must be agreed upon and put into effect. The problems can't all be solved overnight, but we have to quit talking about it and start working on it. Certain drainage and flooding problems can be solved through proper maintenance and upgrading of existing ditches and right-of-ways.
2) Upgrade infrastructure: A long-range plan with a sound maintenance program is needed. Our infrastructure is old and costly to maintain. Pumps, pipes and crews are overworked.
3) Fiscal management: City money is your money. You must have responsibility and value your tax dollar.

I have a pride in Waveland that can't be put into words. Through my community involvement, work with our children and successes in business, I've tried to show it through my actions. By offering my commitment and services as Alderman of Ward 1, I can continue to help the community that I love so much.
I have a youthful energy and abundant ideas to offer our new Mayor, to help move Waveland forward.
Good business sense and level headed discussion and planning is needed in time of rapid growth. I've shown my ability to work with others and bring the community together for a common goal ... "What's Best for Waveland."

Lawyer leads Rocks over St. Paul

Coach Jerry Spell commented, "The boys are responding well and seem to be improving with each week."

In varsity action, the Rocks had a slight 13-8 lead after a slow first period. The Rocks started to pull away from the Wolves when Brandon Benoit hit back to back jumpers with 3:07 to go in the half. The Rocks went into the intermission with a 32-27 lead.

After the break the Rocks came back on fire. Terry Lawyer had a put-back with 3:38 to go in the third period that made the score 54-38. At the end of the third period, the score was 61-47.

THE BRIDGES OF MISSISSIPPI

Nearly a century ago, native Mississippian Parham Bridges had a vision for the future. Family and community oriented, the vision was for an honorable life in a place he was proud to call home.

Parham knew the value of investing in what he believed in. Now, four generations of Bridges have built upon this vision through mortgage lending and real estate development...sound reinvestments in Mississippi communities.

At Bridges Mortgage we can help you build on that vision too, with the kind of old-fashioned personal attention you just can't get from larger financial institutions.

If you're looking for a lender that will take a little extra time to find just the perfect mortgage, and for personal service that makes you feel at home, its time to call Bridges Mortgage.

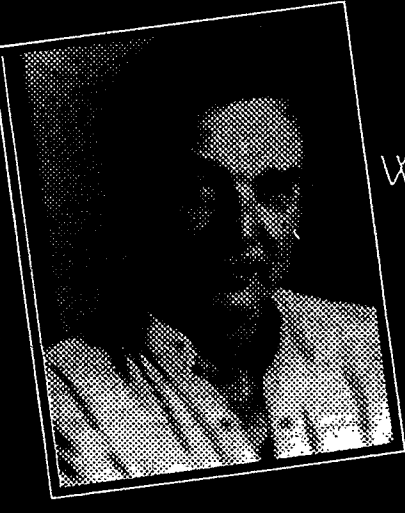

The Bridges of Mississippi invite you to share in the best of life. Call or come by today to learn more about Bridges Mortgage Company. Many lenders offer pre-qualification services, FHA, VA, conventional, fixed and adjustable rate mortgages, as do we, however at Bridges Mortgage Company, we're offering you the Bridges' vision...a vision for the future.

A small class of seventh graders from Bay Junior High School, taught by Susan Mason, made Thanksgiving costumes last week with the help of RSVP volunteers. Assisting were Natural Helpers from Bay High, DeShawn Peebles, Erica Schwartz, Christina Prescott and Kellie Zimmermann and their leader, Melissa Johnson. The students participated in a casual costume competition by parading before several judges. Three won candy bars for their efforts. Jay Lagasse, with the Telephone Pioneers, was on hand to help out.

Generous donations

Faye Alliston's class of fourth graders at Bay Middle School collected non-perishable food items and canned goods for the needy. The food was donated to the Hancock County Food Pantry for distribution during the holidays. Students in several other classes pitched in to help. (Echo photo by Charlee Marshall)

Merchants prepare for 'Christmas in the Pass'

As the holiday season approaches, the merchants and citizens of Pass Christian are preparing for one of the city's biggest family events, "Christmas in the Pass."

An evening event open to the public, "Christmas in the Pass" has become the city's traditional "open house" celebration. The event is sponsored by the Pass Christian Area Council of the Gulf Coast Chamber of Commerce, the City of Pass Christian, and strongly supported by the merchants of Pass Christian.

"Christmas in the Pass" features open house at the businesses throughout the downtown area, with refreshments and special events during the evening, a parade with Santa, strolling carolers, bands, lighted yacht parade, art displays, and local restaurants and vendors serving various foods throughout the downtown area.

The city will be decked with holiday cheer, and festivities will begin at 4 p.m. until 10 p.m.

A drawing will be held at 9 p.m. for a contemporary loveseat, and you can enter the drawing at all the merchants.

"We in Pass Christian hope that you will help us spread the word on the city's annual holiday celebration on Friday, Dec. 2, and that you will personally join us in welcoming the holiday season," said Laurie D. Danielson, Christmas in the Pass publicity chairman.

Home Health Care: A growing health care alternative for Mississippians

By Penny Bishop
 Director of Volunteer Services
 Professional Home Health

Home health care services have been increasing at a rapid pace in Mississippi due to patients being discharged earlier from hospitals and lack of nursing home beds. To accommodate more patients, a greater need for more highly skilled care is needed. The agencies of Mississippi are meeting these needs.

Currently, Mississippi's health industry consists of 81 home health agencies representing hospital based agencies, health department based agencies, and free standing home health agencies. Approximately 63,311 state residents received home health services last year. The Mississippi ratio of home health agencies to the number of patients well exceeds the national average.

The home health industry offers a wide range of quality services to Mississippians, such as skilled nursing, physical therapy, speech therapy, occupational therapy, personal care, and specialty services ranging from psychiatric nursing to Hospice care. Along with experienced and quality service, the state has one of the highest levels of nationally certified home health aides.

The average cost of state agencies are well controlled below the national level. Approximately seven home health agencies serve each Mississippi county.

The Mississippi Association of Home Care (MAHC) is a non-profit trade association incorporated in 1975 to operate for the benefit of member home health agencies, home health related agencies and the benefit of the public in fostering and maintaining high standards of home health care.

Members of MAHC include home health providers and hospital-based home health providers, as well as associate members representing private duty agencies, medical equipment suppliers, IV companies, consultants and professional service providers.

Home care will continue to increase at a fast pace, as home care has shown to be more economical than hospitalization or nursing home care when used appropriately.

Long-term care insurance — do you need it?

By Jan Lukens, MBA, CFP
Consumer Money
Management Specialist

Q. I have heard a lot about long-term care insurance but I'm not sure if I need it. I'm 65 and on Medicare. I also have a Medicare Supplement policy that is Plan J of the 10 standardized forms. Should I buy long-term care insurance and if so, what should I look for in a policy?

A. In the United States, there are 8.8 million people over age 65 receiving long-term care services. The New England Journal of Medicine reports that there is a 43% chance that you will need long-term care if you live past age 65.

To answer your question, ask yourself how will you pay should the need arise? Many consumers believe that Medicare or Medicaid will provide nursing home care for them. There are some fallacies in that belief.

Medicare currently provides some coverage for skilled nursing facility care up to 100 days of confinement. Your supplement policy will fill in Medicare gaps through that 100-day period. But "the level of care needed by 95% of nursing home residents is custodial" according to Bernard Barrie, president of Benefit Services Inc., a clearinghouse for long-term care insurance. Medicare and Medigap policies do not pay for custodial care.

Medicaid pays and will probably continue to pay for lower income elderly to receive nursing home care. For those with resources, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 (OBRA-93) greatly limited access to Medicaid without depletion of family assets. Rules on transfer of assets and trust arrangements were significantly changed. The Act also requires states to recover any Medicaid benefits disbursed on or after Oct. 1, 1993 from the estate of a deceased.

Without long-term care insurance, resources can be quickly drained. Chuck Thompson with Thompson, Diaz, Baxter and Associates says "families in our area should plan for a current minimum cost of $70 per day."

Barrie cites another reason for consumers to select long-term care insurance — control. Long-term care choices may be more limited when Medicaid is paying the bill.

When buying long-term care insurance, Thompson advises younger consumers to get an inflation rider. He says "older consumers may find it less necessary to pay extra for this feature. However, they may wish to purchase a slightly higher dollar benefit as some protection against rising costs."

Thompson and Barrie recommend blending a long-term care policy with other resources to cover the cost. Barrie said "insure 80%-90% of need, plan to pay 10%-20%. This strategy helps preserve family assets while minimizing insurance expense.

Look closely at what triggers benefits on your policy. According to Thompson, to find a policy with the most easily accessed benefits look for a broad definition such as this, "medical necessity or inability to perform 2 of 5 activities of daily living or cognitive impairment."

Among factors affecting price is the ability to receive home health care benefits. To provide this type of coverage can drastically increase premiums — in some cases doubling them.

World AIDS Day to be observed

In honor of the seventh annual World AIDS Day, 1994, the South Mississippi AIDS Task Force invites Coast residents to participate in a candlelight service in Gulfport on Thursday, Dec. 1 at 7 p.m.

The international observance is a commitment for people to fight against the AIDS epidemic and a tribute to people who have died from AIDS and the people living with AIDS, their families and friends.

A candlelight service will be conducted at Handsboro Presbyterian Church, 1304 East Pass Road, Gulfport at 7 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 1.

Church clergy members are encouraged to ring their church bells for a one-minute period beginning at 7 p.m. in memory of people who have died from this incurable disease.

Following the service, students from Our Lady Academy in Bay St. Louis will host a reception at the Fellowship Hall in the back of the church. Everyone is invited.

Mayors of all Coast cities have been asked to sign a proclamation in observance of World AIDS Day.

The South Mississippi AIDS Task Force is a non-profit organization that provides HIV/AIDS education to the community and social services to people who are HIV-positive, people with AIDS and their families.

For information call Bill Brent or Marianne DuBose at 435-3999.

Heart problems cause puppy to tire easily

By Dr. Wynn Jones
Veterinarian
MSU College of Veterinary Medicine

"My dog had puppies about two and a half months ago. All the puppies have homes except one. The last one is a runt, and I have decided to keep him.

"Besides being the smallest puppy, he doesn't seem able to keep up with his brothers and sisters and tires easily after playing. I always have known puppies to be bundles of energy. What could be causing his fatigue?"

Your puppy may be suffering from some type of heart problem. Few puppies are born with heart defects, but when they do occur, they vary from defective valves to holes in the wall of the heart.

The age of onset and severity of symptoms depends on the type of heart problem. A puppy affected at an early age is smaller and thinner than its litter mates and may have a swollen abdomen.

The puppy will be less inclined to run around and will tire easily. Sometimes the puppy's gums and tongue will have a bluish tint instead of a pink color from a lack of oxygen.

If you notice any of these symptoms in your puppy, have him examined by your veterinarian as soon as possible.

When the veterinarian listens to the puppy's heart, he or she may hear a heart murmur. The heart also may sound louder than normal or beat more quickly.

Further investigation through the use of x-ray will show if the heart is enlarged or misshapen.

The best treatment for congenital heart defects in puppies is surgery, but this is possible for only certain defects. In most cases, restricting exercise and prescribing heart stimulants and diuretics may temporarily improve the condition.

"I have noticed a weeping sore under our golden retriever's ear. He is constantly pawing and scratching at it so it never gets a chance to heal. I have tried to clean it and put dressings on it, but it will not go away. Is there anything else I can do?"

Your dog may have more than a simple wound or sore. He may be suffering from wet eczema.

This condition is characterized by a localized wet, painful, acute inflammation of the skin caused by excessive scratching or licking by the dog. This condition is most common in several breeds, including golden retrievers.

retrievers.

The initial cause is not fully understood but is thought to be a secondary reaction to flea bites. If left untreated, the inflamed area can spread.

This is a painful condition for your dog and will not go away without proper treatment. Be sure to have your dog examined by your veterinarian right away.

Your veterinarian will likely clip away the matted hair and clean the skin thoroughly to remove all discharge. Anti-inflammatory creams and possible injections may be used to reduce the irritation. Antibiotics often are necessary to clear up any infection.

"I have heard a great deal lately about feline urologic syndrome. I have owned cats for many years, and to my knowledge none of my cats have suffered from this condition. What should I know about the syndrome, and how can I recognize it in my cats?"

Feline urologic syndrome is a result of cystitis, which is bladder inflammation or a combination of cystitis and an inflammation of the urethra. A cat suffering from the syndrome will urinate frequently. The urine often contains blood.

A partial or complete obstruction of the urinary tract also may develop. This condition can be fatal if left untreated.

Other signs of the syndrome include prolonged squatting and straining when urinating, urinating in unusual places and tenderness or pain in the abdomen. A cat with this condition usually will have a loss of appetite, appear lethargic or begin vomiting. This usually occurs when the urine flow is blocked.

Many factors are associated with the cause of the syndrome, such as obesity, a diet too high in magnesium, infrequent urination caused by a dirty litter box or a litter box not easily accessible, reduced physical activity and not enough water. When such factors are present, crystals form. These crystals irritate and inflame the urinary tract and slow or block the urinary flow.

This condition should not be ignored. If you suspect your cat is showing signs of feline urologic syndrome, immediately take it to your veterinarian.

"My cat has black bumps or blackheads on his chin and around his lips. It doesn't seem to bother him or cause him any discomfort, but it doesn't look pleasant. Is there anything I can do about it?"

Your cat may have feline acne, a skin condition occurring primarily around the chin and lips. Mild cases of feline acne usually are blackheads as you described. This may happen because the cat does not wash the chin area thoroughly or because of abnormal oil secretion of the skin glands in the area.

When infection occurs, the chin may swell, and in severe cases actual pustules or small abscesses form. While mild cases of feline acne usually respond to treatment, recurrence of the condition is common because the underlying problem remains.

Mild feline acne can be treated at home by washing the affected area daily with a gentle soap and rinsing. The area also may be gently scrubbed with rubbing alcohol. If the condition does not respond to treatment or becomes infected, take the cat to your veterinarian.

If you have questions concerning a pet's health, contact Dr. Wynn Jones, MSU/CVM, Box 9825, Mississippi State, MS 39762.
